May 16 — Since the Feb. 6 announcement of the generous donation by ConocoPhillips of Research East, making possible the establishment of the National Sensor Testing Center here in Ponca City, PCDA listened to many opinions, theories and assumptions about the center.

What is the actual name? The University Multi-Spectral Laboratory.

It is a project of Oklahoma State University but it must have an independent name and operator in order to market the facility to universities, (including one wearing crimson and cream) private companies and government agencies to maintain its credibility as a neutral third party test site.

Will it be dangerous? The UML will be up to a level three lab. Level four is the nasty stuff. The state-of-the-art UML will do the same level of work for which Research East was designed.
